LITON TOWN caused disappointment to their supporters by the decisiveness of their defeat at Cardiff, but it must be said that they scarcely deserved to be beaten by a margin of three goals. Bad luck dogged them throughout the match, and this was most apparent in the second half, when many efforts which deserved to score missed the target by inches.

MARTIN WAS THE CHIEF SUFFERER in this respect, and the Cardiff defence was well blessed by fortune time after time. In the first half, too, Roberts had the worst luck possible when a great shot hit the angle of the post and the bar. A goal at this stage might have made all the difference. difference.

IT MUST BE ADMITTED, however, that the Town failed to reproduce anything like the form which made them such a force in the Third Division last season, and they were never really playing well together. This was particularly noticeable in the first half, when they took a long time to settle CARDIFF had more of the play, and the Town defence was hard pressed, and several mistakes were made. Bad marking led to the first goal, which was scored by SMITH (C.) following a corner, seventeen minutes after the start. He was standing behind the rest of the forwards when the ball came to him, and there was no one near enough to tackle. The second was also scored by the City centre-forward, who took advantage of a slip by Nelson to slip through and beat Dolman from close range. This goal came after thirty-one minutes.

This goal came after thirty-one minutes.

IT WAS AFTER this further setback that Luton began to show better form, and in the second half they promised even better. However, another snap goal, scored by PUGH, the brilliant young winger, put paid to any chances there were of saving the match. The Town had the bulk of the play subsequently and for long periods the home backs and halves had to work overtime to keep the score-sheet blank.

THE LUTON FORWARDS made frantic efforts to score, but they simply could not get the ball into the net. Their finishing left a lot to be desired, although much of the approach work was brilliant. Mills was once again opposed to a big, resolute centre-half, and did not have much chance to show what he can do. Stephenson was not given enough work, and Hodge, on the other wing, was very clever, but held the ball too long before getting it across.

ROBERTS showed an improvement on his Walsall form, and Martin worked very hard. The wing halves were only moderate, and their service to the forwards was poor for the most part. Nelson had an indifferent first half, but he was his old self after the interval, and successfully stopped Smith (C.). The defence as a whole, however, was not as solid as usual, although Mackey and Smith (T.) got through a tremendous amount of work. The latter had a hard task in marking Pugh, who frequently showed him a clean pair of heels.

NO FAULT could be found with Dolman, who had absolutely no chance of saving the shots which passed him. He effected who had absolutely no chance of saving the shots which passed him. He effected several excellent clearances, and fielded the ball cleanly. Cardiff have an improved side, and while they are not likely to emulate the deeds of the men who wore their colours in their more palmy days, they should gain a very respectable position in the League before the end of the season.

At Luton on Monday.

The referee awarded a negative kick, and PAYNE netted with a territisher shot. Walsall again strove to get a great and nearly did so through a missingly standing among the home defenders and Dolman had to make one or two space had the end came without further score.

LUTON'S rearranged forward line showed any amount of grit and perseverance although the finer noints of the game are not so much in evidence. Hodge was the nick of the five and played brilliantly bet. Roberts also did grand work, and all seem triers to the end. The halves gave please of support to the attack and there are nothing wrong with the rearguard must their misunderstanding just before the and and their might well bave proved fatal.

WILSTI, owed nearly everything conditionally and Morgan did well at half his only Bulger of the forwards showed the ability to give the home defence and there were 11,000 spectators.

OVER 6,000 SPECTATORS saw a very keen, hard-fought game, in which the champions of the London Combination were fortunate to take away a point. In some phases of the game they were better than Luton, but the Town did much the more pressing, and had the forwards been able to clinch their attacks better, the two points would have remained at Luton.

POMPEY STARTED WELL, and the ball went from end to end at a great pace. It was the virtue of quick tackling and good positioning that showed the superior tactics of the visitors, but the Town responded gallantly, and when they began to swing the ball about in the way of the visitors they were rewarded by giving the Pompey defence pulsating moments.

STRONG made several brilliant saves in the first half, and at the other end M'Carthy hit the bar with a great shot. Each side got the ball into the net, Ball for Luton and Crawshaw for the visitors, but the former had pushed off an opponent before shooting, and the latter was whistled offside dong before he got to the ball to shoot.

THERE WAS NO SCORE until some time to shoot.

THERE WAS NO SCORE until some time

after the interval, and it was anybody a game right to the end. Curiously enough, Luton opened the score when they were short-handed, Patrick having left the field for attention to a damaged knee. The ball was swung across goal, and beat all the defenders so that all STEVENS had to do was to head into the vacant goal, but credit must go to the youngster for the sensible way he had closed in, a thing he did often and rightly.

IT APPEARED as though this would be the only point, but there was some rather indifferent play by the whole of the Town defenders during an assault by the visitors, and although the ball was once cleared. and although the ball was once cleared.
It was returned to find CRAWSHAW unopposed with the easiest chance in the world, and he took it.

COEN did his work well, and Booton gave a very fine display at back, with Hubbard little behind. The halves all did well, and none better than Kidd, whose skill was as high as that of any player on view although at times his passing was not so good. M'Ginnigle was usually too much for the opposing leader, and Gooney put in capital work.

good Mong THE FORWARDS did not have a good day. They were not quick enough to overcome the sharp tackling, lusty kicking and vigorous charging of the opposition, and although Strong was much more frequentlested than Coen and his goal had taccloser escapes, there was much room for tested than Coen and his goal had tartelested than the home attack. Slean was the outstanding artist, but Patrick was thrustful until he got hurt. That all were workers is true, but with Ball invariable smothered by the opposing pivot, there were not many good shots.
