Who Goes Down To Division III?

WHO goes down from Division 11? It would be a bold man who even at this stage of the season would attempt to forecast the unfortunates who will be appearing in Taird Division foot-

The more one studies the problem, the more complex it becomes, but consideration of the picture as a whole must place the fown in a somewhat precarious position. Much depends, of course, on what they can pull out in the vital weeks that he anead, and any of the present strugglers could get well clear by striking a good ratch now.

At Least Nine Are Threatened

WITHOUT a close study of the Second Division table, it is not easy to decide where to draw the line between those on whom the shadow is falling and those who are in the clear.

At the moment there are nine teams who might conceivably go down, and above them are four more who are only one point better off, and who could easily meet with disaster were things to go badly for them. Those most involved in the struggle just now are Blackburn, Bradford, Luton, Queen's Park Rangers, Plymouth and Coventry. Add to these Cardiff, Leicester and Grimsby, and you have most of the pieces in this relegation jig-saw puzzle.

Cardiff In Danger Zone For The Moment CARDIFF, equal on points with

Blackburn, but with two matches in hand, one of which is at home, look reasonably safe, but must be considered in the danger zone for the time being Continued success in the F.A. Cup could prove a source of emparrassment to them, as it did to Leicester City last season. Matches in which the lowly teams meet each other might well prove to be the deciding factor, and Queen's Park Rangers have four of these and, in addition, have to meet, at home, promotion aspirants in Sheffield United, Sheffield Wednesday and Spurs, and Hull City, away. Coventry Have A Very
