Mid-week floodlit matches such as the Town had with Watford, mean delayed team selection for the following Saturday, but there was a clue to the Town's line-up at Blackburn by the recall last night of George Cummins after being left out of the team for the last five League games.

In the meantime, Cummins earned himself another Eire International cap and has really come back the hard way by playing himself into his best form with the Reserves. assured them that the difficulties they faced were fully realised.

Main doubt about the Town's line-up at Ewood Park is whether Bert Mitchell will have recovered sufficiently from the pulled muscle that kept him out last Saturday to return to outside-left against one of his former clubs, for it was to join the Rovers that he left Stoke City, Other than that, and barring injuries that have to be budgeted for in these extra matches the ream is likely to differ little from that which played against Watford.

the side is Mooney, who was secured from Manchester United, and who is keeping former Town player Alex Glover out of the To keep their promotion hopes alive, Blackburn need both points from their meeting with the Town, who will have to be at their best to avoid defeat.

For the Town Reserves, still hopeful of pressing home then championship claims, there is a home match with Cardiff City which should prove an attraction. Emphasis On Town's Promotion Ambitions

NONE of the discussion that was provoked when the election of directors came to be considered at the meeting that followed was produced when the Town F.C. shareholders considered the accounts for the year ended July 31.

These showed a loss on the season's working of £2,926, but the result was regarded as satisfactory and the chairman, Mr. Charles Jeyes, described the balance sheet as fairly good.

In reviewing the year, he emphasised again the promotion ambitions of the Board and laid the blame for the apparent failure to secure the prize this season at the door of injuries.

"WE have to remember that we are up against the human element and that is something we

To the players, he paid tribute for the football they have played during the past few seasons and added that he did not think that any club had a better set of men for club-mindedness than they had at the present time.

The future he described as being in the lap of the gods because circumstances could alter prospects so considerably. They had injuries and also weaknesses that they wanted to remedy, but, very often, they were up against the financial angle,

LUTON TOWN RES. .. 2 Weakened by injuries though they were, especially in defence, the Town Reserves put up a hard, effective fight against a strong Portsmouth team at Fratton Park and thoroughly deserved to return with a point. There could have been little complaint had they snatched the other, for they played some good

Despite the fact that he tended to hold the ball too long at times Cullen was more dangerous than Taylor, who was erratic in his finishing. OVERCAME HANDICAP

LUTON TOWN 1 BRISTOL ROVERS ... 1 In their last four home League matches the Town have dropped four points-points that would have kept them among the promotion-seeking clubs-and, in each case lack of scoring power has been at the root of the trouble.

it was at Kenilworth-road on Saturday when the Town had sufficient of the first-half play to have ensured adequate revenge for that Cup defeat unexpectedly inflicted on them by Bristol Rovers in 1951, though he tried, and Adam, last-As has been pointed out before, I one goal can never be regarded as a winning margin in any match, for there is always the possibility of accidents in defence. Whether what happened immediately before the Rovers' equaliser in this match can rightly be regarded as in this category is a moot point and the home fans stood aghast 20 minutes from the end when Owen blatantly handled the ball in front of goal and there was never any doubt of what the referee's decision would be.

The official immediately

The official immediate pointed to the spot to give the Rovers the chance to save a block they had not point which they had not looked like doing previously.

PITT made no mistake, despite a frantic dive to his left by Streten, who was beaten by the pace of the ball.

Before this, the Town had been going along holding the lead that DOWNIE had given them in the 32nd minute with a shot that went in off Bamford after Turner had made the opening for him,

There had been signs of goals before this arrived, including near misses by Turner and Downic and, afterwards, Turner was unlucky to be the victim of a trip from behind by Warren after he had beaten the centre-half and was steering a clear course for goal

More activity by the Town forwards followed after the interval, but, after the opening stages, goals did not look probable and the match looked like fizzling out into a narrow win for the Town until Owen conceded the penalty.

INSTINCTIVE ACTION Explanation of the incident by the manager afterwards was on the lines that it was an instinctive action by Owen after the flight of the ball from a corner by the ball from a corner of McIlvenny had been changed by Watling's head. Whatever the reason, it was a costly affair to the Town, even though Hale would have been a possible scorer had the ball been allowed to go through Nevertheless, the fact remains that the forwards are still not giving the defence any margin for mistakes and too much reliance is being placed on the strength of this department,

And strong it was in this a great deal of concern, even when

Hale tried to steam-roller his way through, for Owen was in dour mood and had full command of the middle of the field, Strong tackling and quick covering by Morton and Shanks meant that there was not the slightest suggestion of weakness in the middle line and the watertight look of the defence as a whole was added to by the sound. ness of Jones and Aherne. On this occasion Jones cut out the frills in favour of more straightforward tactics and Aherne gave another first-class display Seldom did the Rovers produce anything in the nature of shots calculated to trouble Streten who dealt safely and poedily with everything that came his way. Forward, there was a different story, for rithough there was some neat and accurate approach work during the first half that looked as if the goal-starved fans might be given a long-awaited treat, goals did not appear as a result. Choice of Pemberton for inside-
