ERIC PUGH talking...

Just how vital is tonight's home match with Hull City from the Town point of view, is dependent largely on the results of their last three matches which, because of the necessity for early printing, can only be a matter of hopeful speculation as these notes are written.

Last season. Hull were among the front-runners for promotion, and it looked a fairly safe bet that they would be prominent again this season.

For various reasons, things did not turn out that way but, recently, they have been showing vastly improved form and, at this stage, looked to be heading out of trouble.

While Hull have often been ambitious spenders in the transfer market, they have also set a good deal of store in producing the home-grown product, something that has served them well in the past.

This is a policy to which the Town are giving increasing attention and, apart from the strictly economic facts which at the moment preclude the spending of fancy prices in the transfer market, there is a considerable amount of satisfaction to be derived from finding young talent that can be brought along on the right lines.

For some time, the Town have been swinging in that direction and their present team is probably the youngest in their long history.

As manager Alec Stock pointed out with some pride, "Seven members of the team that beat Burnley had less than 60 League appearances each to their credit, and some considerably less than that."

Not all geese can turn out to be swans, of course, but the Town's coaching staff have a notable record of success in bringing along young players.

In this respect, it is necessary to think only of Keith Barber, Don Shanks, Peter Anderson and Viv Busby, all of whom had no sample of League football when they came on to the Kenilworth Road staff.

"Bringing along young players is something at which my coaching staff excel, so it is a policy that we must keep going, apart from other considerations."

Those considerations, of course, are the constantly rising prices demanded for players who have some way to go before they can prove their ability to command regular places in Second Division football.

And, although it is generally considered that the standard in Division I is considerably higher. that has not always worked out in practice.

Outstanding teams in Division II can hold their own in the higher grade. Sheffield United have proved it this season and so have Leicester City, with rather less spectacular effect.

Without any doubt at all, the Second Division is a hard competition in which, to do well, it is necessary for a team to be considerably above the average.

Proving the truth of that are Burnley and Blackpool, both relegated last season, and they have found that the path back is by no means easy. Nor did Sunderland and Sheffield Wednesday when they came down the previous season.

A look at the League table will prove that, apart from certain exceptions such as Watford, who have badly lost their way this season, thereis a surprising level of ability in the Second Division.

And Birmingham have proved that there are few chopping blocks here, by reaching the semifinals of the F.A. Cup, claiming on the way such distinguished scalps as Ipswich Town and Huddersfield Town.

One is aware of course, that purely from the weight of money available to them, there is becoming a tendency to a "closed shop" at the top of the First Division.

On the other hand, I can think of more than one of the more richly endowed clubs who have had a struggle this season.

TONY WHITE Junior Supporters Leader

The greatest football team in the world is nothing without supporters. And this vital aspect of the game was one of the priorities given to Promotions organiser Mike Skinner on his appoin-with teams in local leagues.

At the time, we had two basic supporters organisations - the Bobbers Club, comprised largely of older followers and an excellent body who had raised £5,000 a year for Luton Town, and the Hatters Club, a modern set-up with equal aims to assist the football club.

So it was decided to form a new Supporters' Club last year with the basic idea of linking the two previous clubs. Overall, there was still the main objective of giving financial assistance to Luton Town, and, in addition, there was the desire to make supporters belong to the football club - a point which is considered very important by Alec Stock. There were initial difficulties in the new project and Mr. Skinner organised a steering committee to point the way to the future. Everything has worked well so far and the membership now stands at over 3,000, counting both the senior and junior categories.

More use has been made of The Hatters Club as a social centre. At one time, the first three or four days of the week used to bring takings of almost zero level, but there is now a much more lively atmosphere, with "disco's", sports forums, stag nights and dances. Next season, it is intended to add more ventures like darts and dominoes.

The first year will be rounded off with a buffet-dance to mark the Player of the Year presentation on Thursday, April 13th, There will be a new award for the Supporter of the Year and the committee of judges will be pleased to hear nominations by April 8th about supporters who have a claim to standing above all others in loyalty and expenditure on following the Town around the country.

Just before the end of the season. Kenilworth Road will be the scene of a six-a-side soccer tournament including both Luton Town and Watford, Jimmy Andrews is hoping to get the International Club to enter a team of former stars and local amateur clubs will make up a competition which promises to give exciting entertainment

Looking back over the first year of the restyled Supporters Club, the Chairman, Mr. Colin. Ball believes that the outstanding successes included the junior section, the work of the entertainment and social committee, and the keen activities of the branches - North Herts, and South Beds (based at Letchworth), Bedford, Aylesbury and Bletchley.

"The function of the steering committee was to lay down the pattern for the future." says Mr. Ball, "Next year we hope to have several new ideas, particularly on the social side. The shop at 125 Oak Road will also be renovated and eventually become permanent offices of the Supporters Club. Regular features at The Hatters Club will include dances. Bingo sessions, and social events for all shades of activity and opinion.

"We are looking for a big increase in membership in Luton's catchment area. Then we can look forward to the day when we have social premises of our own. In turn, this would allow further financial development and greater facilities to organise an even wider range of activities."

At this stage of last season, Hull City were firmly linked with the chase for a place in the First Division. Yet, within months of reaching the doorstep of the "big league", Hull found football fortune turning sour on them and they have spent most of this campaign associated with the relegation candidates.

Indeed, a season of change — and in more ways than one. On the administrative side, there has been a turnover of personnel, with long-serving general manager Cliff Britton retiring and Tommy Docherty making a brief appearance as assistant manager in between his job in Portugal and his new post as Scotland team manager. To replace Docherty, player-manager Terry Neill brought in experienced Everton coach Wilf Dixon, who was an important member of the Goodison staff during the 1969-70 Champion-ship season.

On the playing front, Hull have also been involved in several big-money transfers. The biggest, of course, was the near-six-figure cheque they received from Coventry City for consistent goal-scorer Chris Chilton. There was also a sizeable fee from Blackpool for long-serving half back Chris Simpkin and another useful cash boost from the sale of Paddy Greenwood to Barnsley.

In all, they are showing a profit of around £50,000 even though they have bought three new men. The top-price arrival was Huddersfield midfield operator Jimmy McGill and they invested in experience when buying West Bromwich Albion skipper John Kaye. The last newcomer was goalkeeper Jeff Wealands, signed from Darlington and an immediate success when replacing injured regular lan McKechnie.

The general upheaval no doubt accounts partly for the decline in Hull's playing fortunes. If any one individual suffered, it was probably free-scoring striker Ken Wagstaff, who lost his goal-supply on the break-up of his partnership with Chilton. "They went together like fish and chips," commented Tommy Docherty at the Wagstaff, a man who has consistently averaged around 20 goals a season, scored only twice in the League until he eventually struck his old form in January. He bagged seven goals in half-adozen matches which produced nine points and considerably eased Hull's relegation fears. Wagstaff also netted valuable goals in a good Cuprun which saw Hull win 3-0 at Norwich and 1-0 at Coventry before going out to Stoke City in the Fifth Round.

Wagstaff's early shortage was fortunately camouflaged by the discovery of a potential star in 22-year-old local boy Stuart Pearson, who had collected 13 League goals by the time he was selected as reserve for the England Under-23 side against East Germany at Ashton Gate. Pearson came to the fore at the start of the season with five goals in the first couple of months, claiming the solitary scores in important victories over Birmingham and Blackpool.

Now that Wagstaff is "on song" again, Hull again have a powerful pair of strikers, as they proved when they shared four goals in a vital victory over Fulham. That was the result which gave Humberside supporters the feeling that Hull's Second Division security was almost assured. They were so much better than the Londoners, and then, in the following match, they were the equals of Norwich until falling to goals in the last ten minutes.

Using Hull's form against Norwich as a yardstick of the side's true ability, there is every reason to expect the Yorkshiremen to be back with the pacemakers next season. Few Second Division clubs have as much potential as Hull and there is a sense of purpose and ambition about all their activities.

Backed by good support at the first sign of success, the Board have spent quite liberally in the last year. They paid around £60,000 for Blackburn half back Ken Knighton, who now leads the side, and also spent well on Ipswich centre half Bill Baxter, who was on loan to Watford for a spell this season.

The newcomers were not able to lift Hull over the final promotion hurdle — a target which has gripped Hull ever since they stormed out of the Third Division with a record 69 points in 1966. Rather like the Aston Villa of today, Hull set new standards for Division III with big spending and big crowds. They paid well over £100,000 for three players and also took the unique step of handing a ten-year contract to manager Cliff Britton.

They have always kept a steady level since arriving in the Second Division and really looked on the way up when Terry Neill took over as player-manager last season. Neill is one of the busiest men in the game, with his dual-responsibility at Boothferry Park and the team manager's job with Northern Ireland. This was partly the reason why Hull was chosen when Ireland had to switch an international against Spain from trouble-torn Belfast.

Ken Knighton attended the same Barnsley school as his Hull club-mate Ian Butler but they took vastly different routes to Boothferry Park, While Ian joined Yorkshire club Rotherham, Ken went out in search of bigger things. After a trial, he signed for

He made his League debut for the Molineux club in 1964/65 but at the end of that season they lost their First Division place. He helped them out on a few odd occasions the following season. too, but when he felt he was not going to make the progress he wanted with Wolves he decided to lower his sights and joined Third Division Oldham Athletic.

That was in 1966 and it was at Boundary Park that he was able to gain the confidence that only a long run of first-team football can give a player. Scouts from bigger clubs began filing reports about his play and there was much talk of a transfer before Oldham eventually decided to let him go.

When his transfer to Preston mid-way through the 1967/68 campaign was completed. Ken felt he had amply repaid the club which gave him his big break - for Oldham received a club record £30,000 fee for him.

In eighteen months with Preston, Ken didn't miss a game and his form was noted by Sir Alf Ramsey who included him in the F.A. touring team which went to New Zealand in 1969. No sooner had he returned from that trip than he was signing more transfer papers. This time his move took him to Blackburn Rovers for a f45 000 fee

Soon he became Rovers' captain and still his performances were creating attention in many centres. Shortly before Royers went down into the Third Division for the first time in their history last year. Ken left them to sign for Hull City who paid a club record £60,000 fee for him

Harters' In Camera

This season has been notable for the development of players who had seen little League football up until last August. And here are three of them in action during the recent win against Burnley ... LEFT: Alan Garner. BELOW: Keith Barber. RIGHT: Don Shanks.

SPORTS

Sportsman in the know Talking to Rian Garner

They obviously produce a patient breed of footballer down Lambeth Way, a virtue in professional soccer that is as vital, in many respects, to the individual player, as correct breathing is to a swimmer. Lose your concentration in the water — and the result can be disastrous. Likewise, patience can be just as important to a young player. Should he lose it before he has been given chance to prove himself, a career can be shattered so positively that it's impossible to put back the pieces in order.

A shining example of the dedication and temperament that is a part of any top-level players make-up, is clearly an asset possessed by Alan Garner, a devoted subject to the greatest Sport in the World, but unfortunately, a character who, after six years hard work and perseverance, could be said to have got less out of the game than he had put into it.

Tipped to win a place in Millwall's League side at 16, Alan was made to wait until he was 18 before he got his chance. Last month, some four years later, when "GARNER No.5" was on the Luton first-team sheet for his debut for the Kenilworth Road club, it became only his third League appearance in FOUR years. Such a record might come as a shock to the "experts" who noted Alan's promise in the early part of his career with Millwall.

But the fact that Alan Garner had accepted the unenvied regular commitment to reserve football throughout such a "blunting" period, is surely a concrete testimony to his reserves of patience.

Alan Garner was a product of West Square schools football, close to where he was born, and though their were no previous footballing Garners, Alan chose to follow this profession with Millwall shortly after completing his education. During a six weeks trial programme with the Lions Colts, the Londoner's growing prospect impressed manager Benny Fenton deeply enough for him to invite Alan to join the club on apprentice terms at the age of 16.

"I thought I should have been given a chance in the senior side well before the big day came in 1967." he says "I sweated for two years to get the opportunity and, you can take it from me, that no one has put more into a debut than I did. So you can imagine my feelings when Millwall, who were only a moderate Second Division side at the time, promptly dropped me for the next game. I was prepared to do my share in the stiffs the same as any other player. But I told Benny Fenton: 'I don't want to play in the reserves much longer.' He told me to give myself more time and because I had respect, I waited another year. The position did not appear to alter, because I went in and out of the League side once more - and I saw no future after that at Millwall."

Harry Haslam, the ubiquitous Luton chief scout, remembered being interested in bringing Alan to Kenilworth Road before Millwall hooked him when the East End club gave their player a free transfer at the end of last season. What Mr. Haslam saw gave him sufficient encouragement and confidence to persuade Alec Stock to step in and secure an obviously ambitious yet somewhat frustrated pivot defender.

Alan Garner knew what he was taking on when he came to Luton at the start of this season. "I realised I could only hope to cover for Chris Nicholl on odd occasions. But I had been hanging around for four years, so I thought a little longer with a fresh club would not be too bad. Chris's transfer has now left the field wide open.

"I reckon I have got a good chance because the management here are fair, and I mean that. We all know where we stand and if a player is showing good form — he will get his chance. It's up to me now. I know I have got competition from John Faulkner. But that is not a bad thing because the more competition you have, the better you are likely to play."

ROUNDUP OF DIVISION 2

Nice to hear that Bob Delgado is successfully taking a first-team opportunity with CARLISLE UNITED. After leaving Kenilworth Road during the summer, he took the long trip north in search of a League career and, for a time, he was kept with limited match practice because Carlisle do not run a professional reserve team.

But an injury to former Newcastle centre half Graham Winstanley allowed Bob a chance of consistent Second Division football and, in his fourth appearance, he scored a goal in the 3-0 trouncing of Middlesbrough.

CARDIFF CITY'S troubles at the foot of the table have caused them to give no fewer than nine players their League debuts this season, The latest in the line: 20-year-old Scottish left back Freddie Pethard, who took over from unsettled Gary Bell. Manager Jimmy Scoular agreed to transfer-list Bell when the player was upset at a disciplinary fine.

An evening newspaper in the North East spotlighted a problem facing SUNDERLAND on the run-in towards possible promotion. They stated: "The startling and stark truth is that if they do not finish in the top two, the Roker Park club would be better off if they finish in the bottom half of the table." Apparently, Sunderland have their players on a bonus system for top places in the table and it would cost the club a five-figure pay-out if they finished third or fourth. Gates at Roker are running 10,000 per match down on the club's "break even" point and the sub-10,000 attendance for a mid-week game against Portsmouth was the second lowest in history.

George Petchey's success in steering ORIENT to a wonderful Cup run has not altered his ideas about the insecurity of the management profession. That is why he continues to live on the South Coast in Sussex and endures a daily journey of two hours to get to his Brisbane Road office.

He says: "I could possibly have been Crystal Palace's coach for life, but I was never No. 1. There were also three managers while I was there and I felt the insecurity of all. So I believe in leaving the family where they have settled and made friends."

When Alan Stevenson signed the forms completing his £50,000 transfer to BURNLEY, his former boss Chesterfield boss, Jimmy McGuigan, forecast: "One day he will play for England." It seems that he is on the right lines because Stevenson was reserve for the England Under-23 side against East Germany.

BRISTOL CITY, having been disappointed in the race to sign Scottish Under-23 cap Jimmy Bone, now of Norwich, have made an appointment designed to give them extra coverage North of the Border, especially at schoolboy level. They have made former Dunfermline manager Alex Wright their Scottish scout and manager Alan Dicks says of his new "signing": "I have known him from my trips to Scotland and recognised him as a man with good contacts and a good knowledge of the game."

Injury news ... Peter Silvester, NORWICH CITY'S valuable striker, is back in training after a cartilage operation in February, but may not be ready to be in on the completion of the Canaries' First Division dream. Dave Merrington, former Burnley skipper who joined BRISTOL CITY last summer, has given up hopes of playing this season after having the plaster removed from his troublesome leg for the second time.

the unsung hero

The oil filter. Hardly the romantic part of a car. But without a filter you can rapidly reduce even the most perfect engine to a tortured misfiring mess. And the same is true if you don't bother to change a filter with a fair degree of regularity. But most oil filters are much of a muchness. So if a filter fits it must be OK. So fit the cheapest. This is a popular misconception that has ruined the life of many a poor innocent engine. Because some cheap oil filters are frankly little better than no oil filter at all. In this life you get what you pay for. AC filters are not the cheapest money can buy. Sometimes a whole 5p piece more than the cheap ones. But if an AC saves the life of

But if an AC saves the life of your engine maybe you'll think the bob was worth it. From Halfords and all good garages.
