

I'M ASHAMED

CHARLTON boss Andy Nelson was in despair last night when he finally woke from this 90 minute nightmare.

"What can I say?" he muttered. "I am ashamed. I am going home".

Shame bit deep into all Charlton's hearts as they relived their horrific afternoon.

It gripped a pathetic defence torn apart by Luton... with Jimmy Husband grabbing four goals in their biggest win in more than 20 years.

CRACKED

No wonder Charlton crept away in dejection while Luton toasted one of their most spectacular performances.

Newcastle's Joe Harvey, who was there to look at Charlton's Mike Flanagan, must have been struck instead by the goal-grabbing power of Husband.

He cracked in the first, fourth, sixth and seventh

And as he sipped a celebration pint afterwards, Jimmy revealed: "The first goal pleased me most. It came from a free kick move that we had practised for hours in training. It made it all worthwhile."

And yet Luton's best goal of all came from Hill, a West Indian born in Cricklewood.

He sent in a big dipper that deceived the unlucky Wood after he had brought off some super saves.

Heal, who came in for the injured Boersma, crowned a sparkling debut by scoring the fifth goal.

Buckley slipped one in as well while the unfortunate Flanagan got a goal for Charlton—from the spot in the last miserable minutes.
