

Saints conned

77/78

SOUTHAMPTON 0, LUTON 1

LUTON "conned" Southampton by playing possum in the first half and springing big surprises in the second, writes EDGAR TURNER.

They ought to have had two or three more goals than the one Futchner headed in the 72nd minute.

That was "stolen" from a free-kick by West.

Fuccillo pushed the ball up. Futchner did the rest—and Luton got their first win in eight matches.

But Boersma must still be wondering about the two goals he should have scored.

Just before half-time he shot into the Saints' side-netting with keeper Wells scrambling on the ground well out of his goal.

Then fifteen minutes later, he hit the woodwork from close range with only Wells to beat.

The ball rebounded to Fuccillo and he blasted it over the bar.

Saints flung everything into a desperate effort to retrieve the situation and MacDougall found the net with an overhead kick, but was ruled offside.

Hebberd had a header brilliantly saved by keeper Aleksic at full-stretch and Ball fired a fierce shot across goal.

Man of the match: John Faulkner (Luton).
