

Switch to Sunday 83/84 a success

Luton's experiment of switching their First Division game against West Bromwich Albion to a Sunday to beat the traditionally low attendances of the last playing Saturday before Christmas proved a big success, writes IAN WILLARS.

Their gate of 11,556 was only marginally below their average at Kenilworth Road, and club officials were delighted.

Luton manager David Pleet was certainly pleased: "The pitch was tacky, the crowd was good and the result was right," he declared.

The attendance was certainly a bonus for Luton who have alienated a large number of their fans with their proposed move to Milton Keynes 20 miles away.
