● DECIDER: Brian Stein lashes in his 12th goal of the season, with an angled drive which went in off the far post. Anton Otulakowski is the Millwall man desperately trying to cover. His mistake had led up to the 31st minute strike. He lost control to give Meka Nwajobi the chance to set Stein free. "It was a very good goal, even if it did come from a mistake," admitted Millwall boss George Graham, who left Kenilworth Road wishing Luton Town good luck for the semi-final at Villa Park next month.

But victory turns sour as yobs go on the rampage

THE WORST violence any mob has inflicted upon Kenilworth Road in my lifetime took the shine off Luton Town's celebrations last night.

Their first FA Cup semi-final ticket in 26 years turned into bitter despair as hooligans from Millwall came to Luton determined to wreck the town, the stadium and the very game that gave them the excuse to gather.

But the achievement by a Town team fighting for First Division survival deserves better than to be buried under the memories of mayhem and madness.

No-one could find answers to the frightening scenes which may have set back Luton Town's hopes of becoming a family club for a very long time.

But so far as the soccer action was concerned, for all the unreal atmosphere surrounding the game, Millwall boss George Graham had no doubts.

"We lost because Luton had the extra class and quality of First Division style," he said.

The Third Division promotion-chasers, who came to Luton with ten consecutive wins behind them, expended plenty of energy and willing determination, and were beaten by a team that put its movements together with much more accuracy.

The decisive goal, brilliantly put away by Brian Stein in the 31st minute, was the perfect illustration of the extra talent the Town displayed.

They should have won more handsomely. Ricky Hill, working to make skill overcome physical opposition from Les Briley, had a header cleared off the line just before the goal, and Garry Parker sent in two drives which screamed past the woodwork with the goalkeeper hopelessly beaten.

Meka Nwajobi also flashed a half-volley over the bar, while at the other end Les Sealey hardly had a serious save to make all night.

Once again Steve Foster and Mal Donaghy were mountains in a Town defence that Millwall could not hope to scale.

Both teams deserve credit

for getting through the game with an atmosphere of brooding violence hanging like a cloud over everything.

The visitors' following simply stormed the gates at the Kenilworth Road end, overflowed on to the pitch, and made play impossible after barely 15 minutes.

At that stage it looked fairly non-violent, and after 25 minutes the players returned from the dressing room to resume the game.

Millwall produced a couple of long drives from defenders, and took a gamble for the last quarter of an hour by taking a man out of defence and sending on sub Kevin Bremner as an extra attacker.

It made no difference to the general pattern of the play, with Third Division hustle and bustle foundering on a rock-solid team unit.

Tim Breacker and Mitchell Thomas gave the Town extra width and options by backing attacks. Wayne Turner tackled and ran—and got into the box a few times to look for his second goal of the season—and Nwajobi, Stein and Mick Harford always had the Millwall defence on edge.

Stein's goal was a beauty, his 13th of the season, and well worth the honour it brings to his club. They will meet league leaders Everton at Villa Park, Birmingham, on April 13.

The odds may well be against the Town reaching Wembley for the first time since 1959, but the spirit and football enjoyment this rebuilt team shows could pose problems for the Merseysiders.

The great tragedy for Luton Town is that they will rarely be allowed to remember last night with the pride the result deserved.

The aftermath of a night of shame for London—but not for Luton, whose fans waited patiently behind their barriers during the trouble—will be the thing most remembered about this cup quarter-final.

"I'm just flattened . . . I don't know what to say," said Town boss David Pleat.

Like all of us who support the Hatters he was weeping inwardly on a night when we should all have been able to enjoy life and a little glow of success that the players earned.

The criminals from London who invaded Luton and turned the pitch into a battleground that looked like the worst of the pit strike violence have a lot to answer for.

Match Details

LUTON TOWN 1 MILLWALL 0
HALF-TIME 1-0

TOWN: Sealey; Breacker, Foster, Donaghy, Thomas; Hill, Turner, Parker; Nwajobi, Stein, Harford. Sub: Moss, not needed.

MILLWALL: Sansome; Stevens (Bremner, 75 mins), Smith, Cusack, Hinselwood; Lowndes, Briley, Chatterton; Lovell, Fashanu, Otulakowski.

THE GOAL: Brian Stein, 31 minutes, quicksilver turn and shot from Meka Nwajobi's short pass after Otulakowski lost control of the ball just outside his own penalty area.

OTHER STRIKES: Town nine saved, six wide and one disallowed because Mick Harford used a crafty hand instead of his head; Millwall six saved and four wide. Corners: 6-5 to Millwall.

SOCCER TRAGEDY: Millwall's fans overshadowed almost everything by seeking violence, mainly with the Police, and causing a 25-minute stoppage.

REFEREE: David Hutchinson. Handled everything superbly. A police inspector from Yorkshire, he might have thought he was back on the pit picket battlefield at one stage as the yobs invaded.

ATTENDANCE: 17,470 was the official figure, but at least 2,000 villains from South London smashed their way into the ground.

ENTERTAINMENT: Stark fear took all the shine off what should have been a lovely night for Luton Town, with their first semi-final appearance in 26 years lined up.

THE BRIGHT SPOT: Luton fans, in the main, stayed on their side of the fences and did not get involved. Then Millwall animals were intent on picking fights with the police.

● NEARLY: Garry Parker, whose introduction at Watford a week earlier revived the Town's flagging cup hopes, goes close against Millwall.

His attacking runs caused major problems for the visitors, and this was a second-half drive from a neat lay-back by Brian Stein which flew narrowly wide of the target.
